

CREATING A UK WITHOUT THE NEED FOR FOOD BANKS

The Trussell Trust supports a network of 1,300 food bank centres across the UK to provide emergency food to people who are facing hardship, as well as support to help people resolve the crises they face. We campaign for change for people locked in poverty and to end the need for food banks in the UK.

We don't think it's right that anyone should ever need to use a food bank, that's why our vision is for a future without the need for food banks.

Too many people in our communities don't have enough to cover the essentials and are forced to make impossible decisions, like whether to buy food or pay household bills.

This isn't right.

Working together we know change is possible. Your support means we can support food banks in the network to provide the best possible help for people in their communities, while working towards a better future, where nobody is forced to use a food bank.

It doesn't happen without you.
